Presentation.

It was the exceeding good fortune of a GAZETTE man to participate in a most enjoyable affair yesterday morning. About thirty employees of Mr. B. C. Evans—young men, eagerly loyal, and young ladies fair and true presented him with a hand-some gold-handled cane. Brave as Mr. Evans is, he could not face the boys, and in his stead he sent bottle after bottle of champagne, whole baskets, and boxes of cigars. There was a double cause for pleasure and exuberant good feeling—loyalty and friendliness to Mr. Evans and Momma's extra dry. We undertake to say that the elegant gold-headed cane will not last longer than the boys and the GAZETTE man's remembrance of this pleasant occasion.

If you are in need of good brood mares, stock horses, trained ponies, the Texas Investment Co., limited, can show you some bargains.

False Alarm.

A false alarm of fire was raised about 3 o'clock yesterday, which had the effect of causing the fire department to turn out. The alarm was occasioned by a bonfire made by some boys in the Fourth ward. One of the hose pipes was fastened to a fire plug in Third street and a great crowd congregated to see the firemen throw water on the opera house. The pressure from the water works was powerful enough to throw a stream on top of the building. Much amusement was created by those handling the nozzle turning the stream on the crowd, who took it good-naturedly and greeted each man who elbowed a chuckling with rounds of laughter.

The elegant dinner the Cafe serves are only fifty cents. Meals served to order. Corner Third and Houston streets.

A Ghastly Find.

A correspondent of the Del Rio Dot, in describing the incidents of a trip to Dry Devil's river, after relating the finding of the remains of two human beings, presumably killed by Indians three or four years ago, says: "Three miles further on, in a lonely spot at the mouth of a dark gorge, and under a clump of sycamores, lay the remains of another poor unfortunate. This man, no doubt, was killed about the summer of 1880, and from letters, papers, etc., found in his coat pocket, his name proves to be Ellis R. Brown, from Lampassas, Coleman, or some of the adjoining counties. He had, to all appearances, been fatally wounded in a desperate fight with a foe hidden in a cedar brake a hundred yards distant, as his horse was tied to a sycamore tree, under which he also died—in doubt a most agonizing death, that of starvation—tied over his master's dead body, that lay festering for days before he was relieved by death from his inexpressible agony. Brown's gun, a 50-calibre Sharps carbine, lay four steps from his body on fullcock, but not loaded, and nine or ten empty shells by it. Near where his head lay were his saddlebags, which had decayed, but under them lay nine carbine cartridges, a small piece of soap, a towel, etc., and pinned up in one of his jacket pockets was a roll which resembled greenbacks, but so decayed as to be impossible to tell. His six-shooter, a Remington cap and ball, was in the scabbard on the belt and hung on the limb of the tree, loaded all around. His book, containing letters, etc., was near by, fastened with a rubber band. On the tree was the mark of a bullet, and, I think, the same ball, after striking the tree, glanced and gave his death wound."
